COVID-19 is making its mark on the US, and with its increasing grip, fear, uncertainty and disbelief are rippling throughout our society. At the Pediatric Cancer Research Foundation (PCRF), we are familiar with these emotions.

As a result of our firsthand experiences, we know a lot about hope, resiliency and optimism. We are witness every day to stunning recoveries; to the role of grace, compassion and humor in the face of tragedy; and to the life-affirming powers of medical professionals and scientific advancements.

We believe our perspective enables us to offer notes of wisdom and optimism during this unsettling time. Most importantly, we want to encourage everyone in the PCRF community and beyond to maintain their patience and hopefulness.

Take comfort in knowing that while many communities are entering a period of isolation to slow the spread of COVID-19, our scientists are working diligently on research that demonstrates the best hope for a cure to childhood cancer. We at PCRF continue in our quest to support these researchers in every way possible. Nothing is more important to us than helping the pediatric cancer community, which is among the most vulnerable in this age of COVID-19.

These families, now more than ever, need to know they are not alone and need to be encouraged.

We want all our families to stay healthy and hopeful during these uncertain times. For many of you, you have been living in this germ-conscious mode for months or years protecting your children from community germs. Our hearts go to each of you struggling to find supplies, navigating social distancing, staying positive, living day to day. We are with you.

Jeri Wilson, Executive Director

Partners in HOPE

Thank you to our dedicated supporters that share our vision of a world without pediatric cancer. Jessica Ishak has been involved with PCRF for the past 7 years.

“PCRF is a family. I have always been in awe of how well they know each and every volunteer, donor and person affected by cancer that walks through their doors.”

Kids don't stop fighting cancer and neither will we!

Get inspired by what others are doing. Together we make all the difference.

We are immensely grateful for the incredible work our supporters put in. PowerStone Property Management hosted their 9th Annual Silent Auction/Happy Hour event last week which was their most successful event to date! They raised over $106,000 for leading edge research - beating their last year's goal by $25,000!

We love businesses that make a difference and give back. Thank you to our friends at Mavenlink for supporting Lynden's fight. Mavenlink employees raised $9,000 with a generous company match making lotus bracelets for the 7-year-old cancer fighting warrior, Lynden.
